in satisfaction (to the extent applicable) of their constitutional, statutory, and ethical obligations. Further, the People reserve the right to move in limine to preclude reference to this information, or otherwise to object to its use and/or introduction into evidence.

Disclosure # 1:

Detective Jose DeJesus, shield number 3103, was the original case detective assigned to investigate the May 16, 2011 robbery by David Cruz and another perpetrator of a man just after the man had left a Chase bank in Brooklyn with $150,000. Detective DeJesus informed the squad commander that he was uncomfortable handling the case, because he had a relative who worked at the bank. However, he failed to inform the commander that the family member was one of the tellers with whom the robbery victim had transacted bank business the day of the crime. The case was reassigned to Detective DeJesus's partner, Detective Franco.

In August of 2011, when questioned by the assistant district attorney assigned to the robbery case, Detective DeJesus repeatedly denied that the bank employee to whom he was related was the teller with whom the robbery victim had interacted on the day of the crime. However, in February of 2012, during preparation for pre-trial hearings, Detective DeJesus, when confronted with a photograph of the teller in question, finally admitted to the assigned ADA that the teller was in fact his brother's daughter.
