DISCLOSURE ADVISORY

For the person named above, whom the People may call as a witness, please be advised as follows.

1. The New York City Civilian Complaint Review Board (CCRB) noted the following misconduct: on April 24, 2018, Gregory King failed to document use of force on the arrest report as required by Patrol Guide procedure 208-15. While officers arrested the complainant's friend for driving with a suspended license, the complainant repeatedly refused instructions to stand on the sidewalk, as evidenced in over five minutes of video footage recorded by the complainant himself. The video did not capture the portion of the incident in question. Eventually the complainant went to the sidewalk, but then walked to the front of his friend's car, as a police officer tried to drive the car away. When Gregory King approached the complainant, the complainant moved back but still did not get on the sidewalk. Gregory King pushed the complainant towards the sidewalk by placing his hand on the complainant's chest. The complainant stated that because he had scoliosis, he could not balance and he fell. Gregory King stated that he placed his hand on the complainant's chest for one second, that he did not apply pressure, and that he did not see the complainant fall. Gregory King later pulled the complainant's hands behind his back and handcuffed him, placing him under arrest for Obstructing Governmental Administration, Disorderly Conduct, and Resisting Arrest. CCRB deemed that use of force reasonable based on the circumstances. While Gregory King did complete a Threat, Resistance, Injury (TRI) report to document use of force, he stated that the arrest report did not provide an appropriate choice within the drop-down list of options to indicate the type of force used.
