stated that officers arrived at his front door and knocked on the window. Solve asked the officers what they were there for, and the officers said they received a report of a domestic violence incident in the building. Both Solve and Solve exited the apartment and stood next to each other on the balcony, and the door to Solve closed behind them but remained unlocked. Police Officer Stephenson informed them that she had received an anonymous phone call for a domestic violence incident at Solve and threatened with a weapon. Solve did not know who reported this incident, and he told her that no one from Solve called the police. Police Officer Stephenson asked if she and the other officers could see if anyone else was inside Solve asked Police Officer Stephenson why she needed to check the apartment if he already told her that no one else was home. Police Officer Stephenson replied that the officers had to enter and that it was "procedure" for them to check the apartment in such circumstances because domestic violence incidents are taken seriously and they could not leave until they made sure that everything was alright in the apartment. Solve Officer Stephenson was the first officer to enter.
stated that she was asleep when the officers initially arrived, and she did not wake up until the officers were already inside the apartment.
According to Event (Board Review 08, 09), a female 911 caller named stated that her boyfriend named threatened her with a firearm at stream at str
Police Officer Stephenson stated that $87(2)(b) told her that he knew that she was there because his girlfriend made accusations against him. Police Officer Stephenson did not know who was in the apartment, and she said she needed to make sure that the girlfriend was okay. She told that his girlfriend accused him of being involved in a dispute with a gun. $87(2)(b) and $37(2)(c) and $37(2)(c
According to People v. Dallas , 8 N.Y.3d 890 (2007) (Board Review 10), officers may enter a private residence without a warrant if they have "reasonable grounds to believe that there is an emergency at hand and an immediate need for their assistance for the protection of life or property," if their search is not "primarily motivated by the intent to arrest or seize evidence," and if there is "some reason, approximating probable cause, to associate the emergency with the area or place being searched."
§ 87(2)(b), § 87(2)(g)

Allegation (B) Abuse of Authority: Sergeant Damon Martin searched Apt. 2 in Brooklyn.

As seen in the excerpt of Police Officer Ardolino's body-worn camera footage, embedded below (Board Review 02), Police Officer Ardolino is seen entering the apartment behind Police Officer Stephenson. Police Officer Ardolino walks towards the rear bedroom and says "221" (which is the New York State Penal Law code for marijuana), and then tells the other officers that he found marijuana in plain view. An officer says the 911 caller was on her way to work and refuses to cooperate. Police Officer Ardolino's first video ends, and then his second video begins with him walking towards the rear bedroom, where there was a closet with no door. Sergeant Marin asks for a flashlight, and then uses the flashlight to examine the top shelf of this closet. This portion of the incident occurs prior to the search warrant being obtained.

and $87(2)(b) and were both in the living room when this took place, and they were unable to see what Sergeant Martin was doing in the bedroom.

Upon being shown Police Officer Ardolino's video, Sergeant Martin stated that he believed that he was permitted to visually inspect the top shelf of the closet with a flashlight as long as he did not "go through stuff." Sergeant Martin believed that the top shelf was in plain view because it was "open," and that using a flashlight to illuminate the top shelf is not considered a "search." Sergeant Martin believed that he needed make sure every "plain view" area was inspected prior to calling the Kings County District Attorney's office so the officers could report what they could find in plain view prior to swearing out the search warrant. He did not illuminate the shelf for any other reason.

In Coolidge v. New Hampshire, 403 U.S. 443 (1971), the Supreme Court of the United States wrote, "the 'plain view' doctrine has been applied where a police officer is not searching for evidence against the accused, but nonetheless comes across an incriminating object." In Brigham City v. Stuart, 547 U.S. 398 (2006), citing Mincey v. Arizona, 437 U.S. 385 (1978), the Supreme Court of the United States wrote, "Warrants are generally required to search a person's home or his person unless the exigencies of the situation make the needs of law enforcement so compelling that the warrantless search is objectively reasonable under the Fourth Amendment" (Board Review 10).

Sergeant Martin stated that his intent in examining the top shelf of the closet with the assistance of a flashlight was to ascertain the contents of the shelf in order to report to the judge what he and the other officers were able to find in the apartment, in order to then obtain a search warrant. Therefore, by his own admission, Sergeant Martin's examination of the closet was motivated by an intent to search for evidence, which violates the definition and spirit of the plain view doctrine set forth in Coolidge v. New Hampshire, which holds that the plain view doctrine applies when an officer is not searching for evidence but nevertheless observes an incriminating object.

It is undisputed that officers observed marijuana in plain view in $87(2)(b) s apartment. alleged that Sergeant Calhoun told her to "open [her] phone" for him. $87(2)(b) used her fingerprint to unlock her cell phone, and then the phone's battery died before Sergeant Calhoun could examine the phone. Sergeant Calhoun then allegedly removed $87(2)(b) s phone from her hand, placed it on a table, and said, "I should arrest you too because you're not showing me your phone." $87(2)(b) was not arrested.
stated that the officers also told $87(2)(b) that she needed to leave the apartment while it was being searched and that she could not take her cell phone with her. Sergeant Calhoun asked $87(2)(b) for her cell phone, and $87(2)(b) said she was not going to give it to him. $37(2)(b) stated, however, that no officer asked to examine $87(2)(b) s cell phone.
